SOME LIKE IT HOT's 1.66:1 visual presentation is indicative of Wilder's utilitarian, minimalist aesthetic. Wide compositions, deep focus, high contrast lighting, and classical camerawork work in tandem to tell the most amount of story in the least amount of individual setups.

~~Billy Wilder's SOME LIKE IT HOT (1959) — THE DIRECTORS SERIES~~

Billy Wilder displays the mark of an auteur in his film Some Like It Hot (1959). His films focus on the witty dialogue rather than gaudy cinematography, keeping the audience's eye on the interaction between the characters. 'It's very nice, very artistic,' he says about an overhead angle shot, 'but who sees the scene from this angle? ...

Like so much of Wilder's work, Some Like It Hot is both bracingly contemporary and ahead of its time, in large part because it embraces a notion of gender and sexual fluidity that's unusual even in the films of today. It's the rare sex comedy that genuinely seems to love sex and boasts no hang-ups about it whatsoever.
