At the 2018 Art of Magic First Day of Issue, the USPS surprised collectors with a souvenir sheet of three unreleased designs. These stamps featured lenticular printing, making the white rabbit appear to pop in and out of the top hat. This was the first time the US used lenticular printing on a postage stamp. Because of this, several freaks and errors were later found of the souvenir sheet including imperfs, misperfs, and more.

LAS VEGAS — The U.S. Postal Service will soon release a special souvenir sheet of stamps that call to mind a famous illusion. The Art of Magic souvenir sheet will feature three identical stamps that show a white rabbit in a black hat. By rotating each stamp, you can see the rabbit “pop” out of the hat. The Postal Service used lenticular printing, a method that creates the illusion of movement and depth, to produce the stamp.
