Theory of Literature is a book on literary scholarship by René Wellek, of the structuralist Prague school, and Austin Warren, a self-described "old New Critic". The two met at the University of Iowa in the late 1930s, and by 1940 had begun writing the book; they wrote collaboratively, in a single voice over a period of three years. Its contents were based on their shared understandings of literature.

Theory of Literature (Fine Arts Music and Literature)—

With Austin Warren, Wellek published a landmark volume entitled Theory of Literature, one of the first works to systematize literary theory. Beginning in the 1960s, Wellek defended the New Critics against the condemnation of their work in the name of a structuralist -influenced literary theory, and is thus sometimes classed as a conservative critic.

Theory of Literature: Wellek, Rene, Warren, Austin: Amazon—

This is a truly remarkable book. The authors sought to unite poetics (literary theory) with criticism (evaluation of literature) with scholarship (research) and literary history (the dynamics of literature in contrast with the statics of theory and criticism). This had to be done in a book of reasonable size, without being eclectic or doctrinaire. The authors succeeded in their aim and the book achieved a vast and somewhat unexpected popularity, especially as a grad student text.

Theory of Literature: Wellek, Rene and Warren, Austin—

It is likely that he is the premier scholar of literature in modern times because he combined all-round mastery of the specialisms of modern literary studies, with encyclopaedic reading in several languages, clear writing, a humane vision and commitment to reason. Ren Wellek's father moved from Prague to work as a government lawyer in Vienna, the capital of the massive Austro-Hungarian empire.
